

So you want to learn to fly, Son

A very much tongue in cheek account of the highs and lows experienced by our anti-hero (probably undergoing a mid-life crisis) in his endeavours to obtain a PPL (private pilots licence) whilst running a busy public house. Written in the first person singular/present tense, an unashamedly not grammatically or politically correct, Ricks virtual expanded diary will take the reader through all his misgivings and self-doubts; providing a, sometimes, hilarious insight into both his arial adventures and the trials and tribulations of running a pub
