

Classic Ghost Stories: The Womans Ghost Story

Classic Ghost Stories - The Womans Ghost Story by Algernon Blackwood Yes, she said, from her seat in the dark corner, Ill tell you an experience if you care to listen. And, whats more, Ill tell it briefly, without trimmings--I mean without unessentials. Thats a thing story-tellers never do, you know, she laughed. They drag in all the unessentials and leave their listeners to disentangle; but Ill give you just the essentials, and you can make of it what you please. But on one condition: that at the end you ask no questions, because I cant explain it and have no wish to. We agreed. We were all serious. After listening to a dozen prolix stories from people who merely wished to talk but had nothing to tell, we wanted essentials. In those days, she began, feeling from the quality of our silence that we were with her, in those days I was interested in psychic things, and had arranged to sit up alone in a haunted house in the middle of London. It was a cheap and dingy lodging-house in a mean street, unfurnished. I had already made a preliminary examination in daylight that afternoon, and the keys from the caretaker, who lived next door, were in my pocket. The story was a good one--satisfied me, at any rate, that it was worth investigating; and I wont weary you with details as to the womans murder and all the tiresome elaboration as to why the place was alive. Enough that it was.
