

Harriet Martineaus Autobiography (Cambridge Library Collection - British and Irish History, 19th Century) (Volume 3)

Harriet Martineau (1802-1876) was a British writer who was one of the first social theorists to examine all aspects of a society, including class, religion, national character and the status of women. These volumes, first published in 1877, contain Martineaus unusual autobiography. Written in three months in 1855 when she believed herself to be dying, the original two volumes remained unaltered despite her recovery and continued writing. The third volume, covering the remainder of Martineaus life, was written by her friend and literary executor, Maria Chapman, who had access to Martineaus private papers. These works were the first substantial published account of Martineaus life and work, and remain a remarkable example of the genre for Martineaus vivid descriptions and candid, outspoken opinions of Victorian society. Volume 3 contains Chapmans biography of Martineau. For more information on this author, see http://orlando.cambridge.org/public/svPeople?person_id=martha
