

In the Frame

[Read by Ralph Cosham] Charles Todd is an English painter well known and respected for his renderings of sleek and athletic horses at the race track. What he now faces at his cousin Donalds house is also art--the art of a perfectly brutal murderer. Donalds home has been burglarized and his wife, Regina, is lying on her back dead, her face the color of cream. Donald is shattered, shocked--and a prime suspect. When Todd discovers a connection between recent burglaries and people who bought horse paintings, the race-track lover finds himself in the biggest race of his life as he works to clear his cousins name and trap a ruthless killer before the killer traps him.
