

James Connolly (Irish Lives)

James Connolly (1868-1916), the son of Irish immigrants, was born in Edinburgh. He came to Ireland in 1896 as paid organiser of the Dublin Socialist Club and founded The Workers Republic, Irelands first socialist newspaper. In 1911 he was appointed Belfast organiser of the Irish Transport and General Workers Union. With James Larkin, he led the workers of Dublin during the Great Lockout of 1913 and when Larkin went to the USA the following year, Connolly assumed leadership of the union. His tiny Irish Citizen Army took part in the 1916 Rising, following which he was executed. This short book has established itself as one of the very best surveys of Connollys life since it first appeared in the early 1980s. Its reappearance will be welcomed by all who remain fascinated by Connollys life, especially its dialogue between socialism and nationalism.
