

The Rain - Part 4 (A Post-Apocalyptic Story)

THIS IS PART 4 OF THE RAIN

Blue City seems too good to be true. So do Dusty and his family. The face eaters are coming in waves--its like theres something they want, something hidden in the tarp city somewhere. Russells strength is returning, and hes ready to head to sea again. But will it be too late? Will Tanner be able to leave Dusty and Marvolo behind? find out in THE RAIN part 4.

BLURB: Exposure, pruned hands, and infection. But since, Rapid City, its the face eaters too. And the crack in the canoe thats growing. And the ice I think I see on the water. Russell thinks its my imagination. We cling to the last strips of the veneer. And each other. There are a lot of stories about how the rain started. The thing that always comes to mind first isnt the how though, its the how much. Russell still does the math too: 15, 5,400, and 8,550. 15 inches a day, 5,400 a year, and 8,550 feet since the start. We have no idea if its accurate. But its important to think about it, he says, because it reminds us to keep moving. Im Tanner. Russell plucked me from the rain when I was two. Fourteen years ago we left Philadelphia. As the water rose, we moved west, hoping the elevation would keep us warm and dry. Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Sioux Falls, Rapid City. Now were stranded on the islands in Wyoming. Russell thinks they used to be the Bighorn mountains. But we cant go back now. Theres no warm and theres no dry anymore. Just a rumor about a place where it isnt raining. So were going to try to make it 520 miles south to Leadville. But we cant drift east, the Great Plains have become waterspout alley, a raging tomb of moving water. Together we push on, surviving, heading to Leadville. But something is wrong with him now. He says its nothing. But his breathing doesnt sound that way.
