

History of England From the Fall of Wolsey to the Death of Elizabeth, Vol. 3 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from History of England From the Fall of Wolsey to the Death of Elizabeth, Vol. 3 The manuscripts which I have quoted in these volumes as being in the State Paper Office, have been removed, since I consulted them, to the Polls House in Chancery-lane. I have retained my original references, since, for the present, they remain by themselves; the intention, however, is to rearrange them, in combination with the MSS. already in the Polls House; and an elaborate catalogue, now in the course of preparation, will reveal to most persons for the first time the enormous mass of material which exists to throw light on the early history of the English Reformation. I should be glad if I could add that the MSS. belonging to the same period which are now in the British Museum would be included in the same series, and restored to the collection from which they were abstracted by Sir Robert Cotton.
