Continued). MAY 14 DISCRIMINATING TONNAGE DUES.1 Mr. MADISON replied to the several arguments against his motion. A gentleman, said he, (M r. SEDGWICK,) had called it a measure of passion. He observed that it had neither been dictated by passion, nor supported with passion; he considered it as a cool as well as a proper measure, and believed that the more coolly it was examined, the more proper it would appear. If any thing more were to be done, let it be something that will be effectual. 1S ee vol. v., p. 339 and 340, n. Madison smotion introduced this day was: That from and after the day of next the tonnage on all such vessels be raised to ;and from and after the day of next no such vessel shall be permitted to export from the United States any unmanufactured article being the growth and produce thereof. This having been disagreed to he offered June 30th the following: And be it further enacted, That in all cases where vessels belonging to the citizens of the United States may be prohibited from bringing any articles from any foreign port or place, by laws or regulations of the sovereign thereof, into any port or place within the United States, the vessels belonging wholly or in part to the subjects of such sovereign shall, after the day of during the continuance of such prohibition, be prohibited from bringing like articles into the United VOL.
